Life is a Destiny

What would you save?

E2 – E3 • Second conditional

Warmer

made by Atin

Imagine you must leave your home today.

You can take only ONE thing.

What would you take? Why?

You can talk about a real or an imaginary person.

Meet Argun

made by Atin

Born: Cyprus, 1949

1963–64: war – his school closed, his family lived in tents

1964: came to London, aged 13, to live with his parents

First jobs: a Wimpy burger bar, then clothes, then printing

Today: he has a printing shop on Mare Street, Hackney!

He took only one thing to London. What do you think it was?

Grammar: the second conditional

made by Atin

Alara: “If my house was being bombed, I would take my phone.”

If + past simple, would + verb

If I had to leave, I would take my phone.

I would take my phone if I had to leave.

We use it for imaginary or unlikely situations – now or in the future.

When ‘if’ comes first, we use a comma (,).

Tips

made by Atin

I would → I'd would not → wouldn't

If I was / If I were – both are OK.

× I would took ✓ I would take

× If I would have ✓ If I had
