Angry shop owner tells graffiti artist: "This is my last warning"

A poster on a Well Street shutter has got people talking. Is it a warning or a threat?

By Bugle reporter · 21 October 2026

A shop owner on Well Street have put an angry poster on his shutter after graffiti artists paint his shop five times this year.

The poster, which has appeared last week, says "This is my last and final warning". It also shows two photos from the shop's CCTV camera.

"I have clean the shutter many times," the owner told the Bugle. "Last month I have paid £200 to clean it. I am work every day and I doesn't want any trouble."

Local people has different opinions. "Some graffiti is art, but this is just tagging," said Maria, who live near the shop. Another neighbour, Tom, said: "The poster is a threat. He should to call the police."

A police spokesperson said: "We will looking at the CCTV. Shop owners should report graffiti to us."

The owner says he will keep the poster on his shutter until the graffiti stops.
