Subject: Help – first camping trip!

Hi Mike,

I hope you're well. I'm writing because I need your advice. Next month, I want to go camping for the first time with my family. We have never camped before, and I'm worried about many things.

First, I don't know where to go. Should we camp in the Lake District or near London? We must choose a place that is not too far from home, because my children are young. We don't need to go far – maybe two hours by car. I could book a campsite with facilities, or we could camp in the countryside. I'm worried because we can't camp everywhere in the UK. Do you know the rules?

Second, what should we take? I know we must have a tent and sleeping bags. But what else do we need? We could buy an expensive camping stove, but we could also cook on a fire. My husband thinks we can use our kitchen table for eating! I think he might be joking.

Third, I'm worried about the weather. It can be very cold at night in the UK. We should bring warm clothes – I agree with my husband on that. Do you think we should go in summer? We must avoid the winter, I think.

Please help! Can you suggest a good place for camping? Should I buy new equipment? What time of year is best?

Best wishes,
Sarah
