Lesson at a glance

Level: E2–E3 (L1 extension). Time: about 2½ hours (whole film first, then clips). Aim: follow a story in two clips; tell a story in the past simple with First / Then / After that / Finally.

Film: Passing Tides (Child Migrant Stories, 18 min) – youtube.com/watch?v=3ePfMggJoFc. Linh left Vietnam by boat with her father when she was seven (1979). A British ship rescued them. They lived in camps in Singapore and on Thorney Island, then in Hackney.

Clips: 1 = 2:54–5:11 (the sea escape) 2 = 5:11–6:56 (the British ship, Singapore) 3 = 6:56–10:49 (life in England, L1 only). Subtitles on. Play each twice.

Sensitivity: the film is about a dangerous sea journey. Some learners may have made similar journeys. In Tasks 6 and 7 any journey is fine – to college this morning is a good model. Never ask learners about their journey to the UK in front of the class.

Clip 1 – what Linh says (shortened, if the video fails)

"My family tried to escape a few times, but there was only enough money for two tickets, for my dad and one other. I was very frightened because we had to wade in the water, with just my head above the water, waiting to board. There were about fifty of us in this tiny boat. The boat was rocking and filling up with water … Suddenly there was this enormous British ship. We had run out of food a couple of days before. They threw down some food – cream crackers and green apples."

Hangman paragraph:

Linh was born in Vietnam. When she was seven, she left Vietnam with her father. First, they waited in the water. Then they got on a tiny boat with about fifty people. After a few days, they had no food. Then a big British ship found them. The sailors threw down crackers and green apples. After that, they stayed in a camp in Singapore. Finally, they went to Britain and lived in Hackney.
