Lesson at a glance

Level: E2–E3 (L1 extension). Time: about 2½ hours (whole film first, then clips). Aim: understand two short clips; use comparatives to compare food and say what you prefer (ESB Task 4).

Film: Ugwumpiti – Maurice's Story (Child Migrant Stories, 16 min) – youtube.com/watch?v=eioWpfYroUs. Maurice was a child in the Biafran war (Nigeria, 1967–70). His parents were studying in England. He came to London aged 9.

Clips: 1 = 3:05–5:40 (hunger, the Red Cross, Ugwumpiti) 2 = 12:30–13:57 (chocolate, cheese, hiding food). Subtitles on. Play each twice.

Sensitivity: clip 1 mentions children dying of hunger. Maurice tells it with humour, but some learners may have lived through hunger or war. Keep personal questions about food light and optional.

Clip 2 – what Maurice says (if the video fails)

"This is the first place I tasted chocolate. Oh, it was horrible. My dad had bought it for me and my brother and we were trying to stash it behind the car seat, because it was horrible, and we were going: 'Yes, it's nice.' Because we wanted to be like other children … It was just so sweet. The only thing worse than chocolate was cheese. I would rather have had a roasted rat than a piece of cheese! … At night we used to take some bread, butter and jam and put it underneath our mattress. It used to make my mum very angry … we didn't really understand that there'd be food tomorrow."

Hangman paragraph:

Maurice was born in Biafra. His parents went to England to study, so he lived with his grandma. During the war there was very little food. The Red Cross gave the children one meal a day. It was called Ugwumpiti. For Maurice, it was better than any other food. When he came to London, he tried chocolate. It was sweeter than anything he knew, and he thought it was horrible. Cheese was even worse!
